

Dr. David Szabla
College of Education and Human Development

A true scholar-practitioner, Dr. David Szabla lives and works at the intersection of scholarship and practice. As a member of WMU's AAUP Executive Committee representing CEHD, David would bring to the table several years of experience working with executives leading not-for-profit, for-profit, education, government, and military organizations, guiding them to reach increased levels of organizational performance by drawing on both the practice and academic literatures. Presently, he is a tenured Associate Professor in the College of Education and Human Development where he leads and teaches in WMU's MA and PhD programs in Organizational Change Leadership. Currently, David is editor-in-chief of The Palgrave Handbook of Organizational Change Thinkers, The Edward Elgar Handbook of Research Methods in Organizational Change, and Research in Management Consulting. His research centers on organizational change, organizational leadership, and the digital organization. Dr. Szabla has been published in several journals including Human Resource Development Quarterly, Research on Organizational Change and Development, and Emergence: Complexity and Organization. David received his doctorate in Human and Organizational Studies from The George Washington University.
